

LUSCIOUS FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

Impressive Array of the Products
Of the Soil at the State Fair.

BEST QUALITY YET SHOWN.

Object Lesson in What Utah Can Produce Under Irrigation and on Dry Farms Generally.

The irrigated, semi-arid and even the desert lands of Utah have this year produced as fine a collection of fruits and vegetables as ever graced the boards of a state fair, and the impressive array is on exhibit in the agricultural building at the inland empire exposition. Farmers who have attended the state fairs for years say that this exhibit is not quite as large as some of those at fairs in past years, but in considering the matter of quality and diverse interest, it surpasses any similar exhibit in the history of the state.

The system of judging has been radically changed. Under the new arrangements, every exhibitor picks out half-dozen specimens of his best displays and these are placed on a plate which is put on a big table. The judges are able to make closer comparison between the entries as they can look over the fruit over as the exhibits stand side by side instead of being compelled to walk around the building, taking notes for comparison, as in former years. This new system greatly expedites the judging, and is considered a method.

William B. Wright of Centerville shows one of the finest and most attractive exhibits, including various and other products, from his irrigated and arid lands. Evidently, it is a matter of indifference to Mr. Wright whether it rains or shines, as he appears to be able to make good on any kind of land. He shows 29 kinds of wheat grown by him on dry and watered lands.

In the south end of the building, Boxelder county has a splendid exhibit in a covered booth, including all kinds of farm products, grapes, pears and apples.

APPLES FROM GRANGER.

L. Hemenway of Granger exhibits various fruits, including apples, pear and plums. His apples are as fine as ever tickled palate, the growing varieties being specially inviting: Rhode Island Greening, Alexander, Winesap, Morden's Russet, Spitzberg, Falma Sweet, Gano, Delaware, Ben Davis, Pearmain and York Imperial. Hemenway's plums include the German, Hungarian, Flemmingburg, Gold Drop, Petites and Silvers. His Yellow Bell Pears are dreams of beauty and flavor.

Most of the farmers have combined their exhibits in association or county displays, and there are few individual exhibits. Most of the farmers of Utah county are represented by nine exhibits under the name of the Utah County Potato Growers' association. Grapes are piled about its exhibit, which consists mainly of the finest apples and pears.

One of the most interesting exhibits, which indicates how the young idea of Utah is taking to plant and grow two blades with some grain before the unique display made by Albert Wagstaff, 16 years of age, whose home is in Salt Lake City. This lad during the last summer has grown in his own garden some of the finest and largest vegetables which are seen in the agricultural building. He shows about 20 specimens and their products of a boy's industry applied on his little home garden compare quite favorably with the exhibits of the great farms. Albert Wagstaff is more than an ordinary youngster, and it is probable that the world will hear more of him in the future. A lad who can grow vegetables of such superior quality that they make the old farmers sit up and take notice is worth the watching.

BOXELDER AND CACHE.

An exhibit of magnificent peaches is shown by the farmers of the Brigham district.

The Cache Fruit Growers' association has a grand display of Jonathan apples.

Experienced agriculturists say that the great state fairs of Iowa, Illinois, Indiana and other rich eastern farming states have never produced an exhibit that could beat six enormous squashes, weighing 1,270 pounds, shown by Provo's Peasant. Beautiful. These squashes make one of the sensations of the whole exposition. Mr. Briggs also displays superb corn, cabbage, carrots, melons, tomatoes, egg plant and other vegetables.

The Spring-Livingston Investment company has an elegant and extensive exhibit of apples, plums and other kinds of vegetables and various other agricultural products, grown on irrigated lands in the Gunnison valley in Utah. It is a meritorious and well-arranged display.

Grapes—
delicious, healthful—
give the most valuable ingredient, the active principle, to
ROYAL
Baking Powder
Insures wholesome and delicious food for every day in every home
NO ALUM

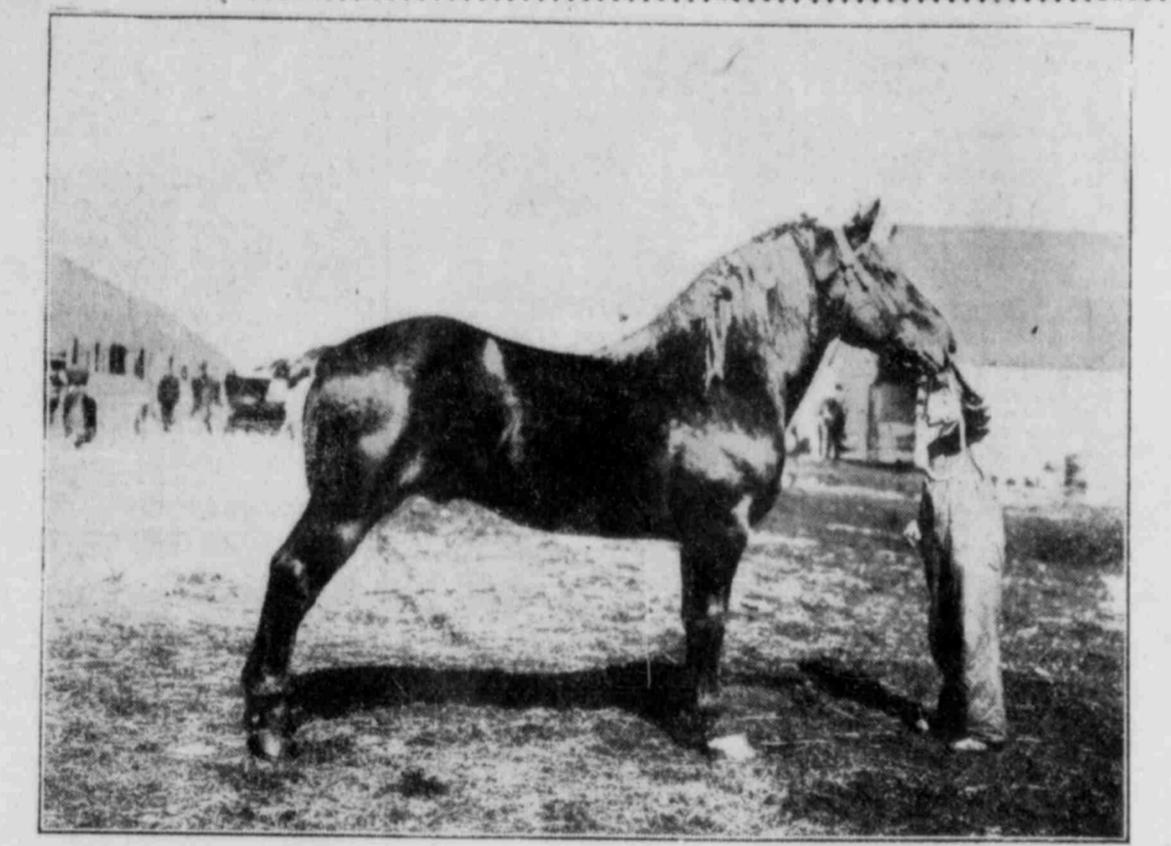

Photo by Utah Photo Materials Co.

"GRANDIN," WINNER OF SWEEPSTAKES FIRST PRIZE OVER ALL AT THE STATE FAIR. THREE-YEAR-OLD PERCHERON, WEIGHT 1900 LBS.

ranges display and should attract numerous spectators to the Gunnison.

The descriptive name Utah seed on Utah farms and gardens is forcibly poached in a series of seed exhibits by the Porter-Walton floral company, and its display is quite an interesting feature.

F. Spencer, Jr., of Provo, has a splendid collection of apples, including Ben Davis, Gano, Jonathan, and Rhode Island Greening.

One of the best collections of vegetables in the building is that shown by Louis Fayer of Calder's station, in this county. His melons, squashes, beets, peppers, pumpkins, cabbages and other truck are enough to make the spectator very hungry if he lingers long about the exhibit.

GROWN IN SALT LAKE.
N. P. Holm, who is what might be termed a "city" farmer, as he raises his stock at 1575 Franklin street, Salt Lake, shows a beautiful display of the feeding varieties of mangold-wurzel, Golden Turnard, and Golden Globe; besides onions, white flint corn, sugar beets, blood beets, pumpkins, Hubbard squash, tomatoes, radishes and other truck.

On the east side of the agricultural building, George E. Booth of Brigham has an exhibit which includes every imaginable kind of vegetable that grows in this part of the country, all of high class. Maybe's display would be a creditable one to represent the farming industry of the State of Utah, if it were chosen for such a purpose.

The William Royley company shows Johnson apples packed ready to ship, and the display was arranged up as a practical lesson to Utah orchardists, so that they may see just what the apples should be packed for eastern shipments. J. Hensley, a well known expert on the fruit from Grand Junction, who is now with the William Royley company here, did the packing, and it is a pretty piece of work.

The farmers in the Nephi district collaborated in getting up an exhibit of the truck grown in that section. Their exhibits of potatoes, beans, melons and wheat are among the best in the building, and have won the admiration of farmers from other parts of the state.

Among the side features of unusual interest is a big exhibit put up by the dairymen of Salt Lake City and environs. Demonstrations of different grades of butter are made before the spectators every hour if he lingers long about the exhibit.

CENTER OF ATTRACTION.
Just outside of the agricultural building, George E. Booth of Brigham has an exhibit which includes every imaginable kind of vegetable that grows in this part of the country, all of high class. Maybe's display would be a creditable one to represent the farming industry of the State of Utah, if it were chosen for such a purpose.

The William Royley company shows Johnson apples packed ready to ship, and the display was arranged up as a practical lesson to Utah orchardists, so that they may see just what the apples should be packed for eastern shipments. J. Hensley, a well known expert on the fruit from Grand Junction, who is now with the William Royley company here, did the packing, and it is a pretty piece of work.

The farmers in the Nephi district collaborated in getting up an exhibit of the truck grown in that section. Their exhibits of potatoes, beans, melons and wheat are among the best in the building, and have won the admiration of farmers from other parts of the state.

Among the side features of unusual interest is a big exhibit put up by the dairymen of Salt Lake City and environs. Demonstrations of different grades of butter are made before the spectators every hour if he lingers long about the exhibit.

CENTER OF ATTRACTION.
Just outside of the agricultural building, George E. Booth of Brigham has an exhibit which includes every imaginable kind of vegetable that grows in this part of the country, all of high class. Maybe's display would be a creditable one to represent the farming industry of the State of Utah, if it were chosen for such a purpose.

The William Royley company shows Johnson apples packed ready to ship, and the display was arranged up as a practical lesson to Utah orchardists, so that they may see just what the apples should be packed for eastern shipments. J. Hensley, a well known expert on the fruit from Grand Junction, who is now with the William Royley company here, did the packing, and it is a pretty piece of work.

The farmers in the Nephi district collaborated in getting up an exhibit of the truck grown in that section. Their exhibits of potatoes, beans, melons and wheat are among the best in the building, and have won the admiration of farmers from other parts of the state.

Among the side features of unusual interest is a big exhibit put up by the dairymen of Salt Lake City and environs. Demonstrations of different grades of butter are made before the spectators every hour if he lingers long about the exhibit.

CENTER OF ATTRACTION.
Just outside of the agricultural building, George E. Booth of Brigham has an exhibit which includes every imaginable kind of vegetable that grows in this part of the country, all of high class. Maybe's display would be a creditable one to represent the farming industry of the State of Utah, if it were chosen for such a purpose.

The William Royley company shows Johnson apples packed ready to ship, and the display was arranged up as a practical lesson to Utah orchardists, so that they may see just what the apples should be packed for eastern shipments. J. Hensley, a well known expert on the fruit from Grand Junction, who is now with the William Royley company here, did the packing, and it is a pretty piece of work.

The farmers in the Nephi district collaborated in getting up an exhibit of the truck grown in that section. Their exhibits of potatoes, beans, melons and wheat are among the best in the building, and have won the admiration of farmers from other parts of the state.

Among the side features of unusual interest is a big exhibit put up by the dairymen of Salt Lake City and environs. Demonstrations of different grades of butter are made before the spectators every hour if he lingers long about the exhibit.

CENTER OF ATTRACTION.
Just outside of the agricultural building, George E. Booth of Brigham has an exhibit which includes every imaginable kind of vegetable that grows in this part of the country, all of high class. Maybe's display would be a creditable one to represent the farming industry of the State of Utah, if it were chosen for such a purpose.

The William Royley company shows Johnson apples packed ready to ship, and the display was arranged up as a practical lesson to Utah orchardists, so that they may see just what the apples should be packed for eastern shipments. J. Hensley, a well known expert on the fruit from Grand Junction, who is now with the William Royley company here, did the packing, and it is a pretty piece of work.

The farmers in the Nephi district collaborated in getting up an exhibit of the truck grown in that section. Their exhibits of potatoes, beans, melons and wheat are among the best in the building, and have won the admiration of farmers from other parts of the state.

Among the side features of unusual interest is a big exhibit put up by the dairymen of Salt Lake City and environs. Demonstrations of different grades of butter are made before the spectators every hour if he lingers long about the exhibit.

CENTER OF ATTRACTION.
Just outside of the agricultural building, George E. Booth of Brigham has an exhibit which includes every imaginable kind of vegetable that grows in this part of the country, all of high class. Maybe's display would be a creditable one to represent the farming industry of the State of Utah, if it were chosen for such a purpose.

The William Royley company shows Johnson apples packed ready to ship, and the display was arranged up as a practical lesson to Utah orchardists, so that they may see just what the apples should be packed for eastern shipments. J. Hensley, a well known expert on the fruit from Grand Junction, who is now with the William Royley company here, did the packing, and it is a pretty piece of work.

The farmers in the Nephi district collaborated in getting up an exhibit of the truck grown in that section. Their exhibits of potatoes, beans, melons and wheat are among the best in the building, and have won the admiration of farmers from other parts of the state.

Among the side features of unusual interest is a big exhibit put up by the dairymen of Salt Lake City and environs. Demonstrations of different grades of butter are made before the spectators every hour if he lingers long about the exhibit.

CENTER OF ATTRACTION.
Just outside of the agricultural building, George E. Booth of Brigham has an exhibit which includes every imaginable kind of vegetable that grows in this part of the country, all of high class. Maybe's display would be a creditable one to represent the farming industry of the State of Utah, if it were chosen for such a purpose.

The William Royley company shows Johnson apples packed ready to ship, and the display was arranged up as a practical lesson to Utah orchardists, so that they may see just what the apples should be packed for eastern shipments. J. Hensley, a well known expert on the fruit from Grand Junction, who is now with the William Royley company here, did the packing, and it is a pretty piece of work.

The farmers in the Nephi district collaborated in getting up an exhibit of the truck grown in that section. Their exhibits of potatoes, beans, melons and wheat are among the best in the building, and have won the admiration of farmers from other parts of the state.

Among the side features of unusual interest is a big exhibit put up by the dairymen of Salt Lake City and environs. Demonstrations of different grades of butter are made before the spectators every hour if he lingers long about the exhibit.

CENTER OF ATTRACTION.
Just outside of the agricultural building, George E. Booth of Brigham has an exhibit which includes every imaginable kind of vegetable that grows in this part of the country, all of high class. Maybe's display would be a creditable one to represent the farming industry of the State of Utah, if it were chosen for such a purpose.

The William Royley company shows Johnson apples packed ready to ship, and the display was arranged up as a practical lesson to Utah orchardists, so that they may see just what the apples should be packed for eastern shipments. J. Hensley, a well known expert on the fruit from Grand Junction, who is now with the William Royley company here, did the packing, and it is a pretty piece of work.

The farmers in the Nephi district collaborated in getting up an exhibit of the truck grown in that section. Their exhibits of potatoes, beans, melons and wheat are among the best in the building, and have won the admiration of farmers from other parts of the state.

Among the side features of unusual interest is a big exhibit put up by the dairymen of Salt Lake City and environs. Demonstrations of different grades of butter are made before the spectators every hour if he lingers long about the exhibit.

CENTER OF ATTRACTION.
Just outside of the agricultural building, George E. Booth of Brigham has an exhibit which includes every imaginable kind of vegetable that grows in this part of the country, all of high class. Maybe's display would be a creditable one to represent the farming industry of the State of Utah, if it were chosen for such a purpose.

The William Royley company shows Johnson apples packed ready to ship, and the display was arranged up as a practical lesson to Utah orchardists, so that they may see just what the apples should be packed for eastern shipments. J. Hensley, a well known expert on the fruit from Grand Junction, who is now with the William Royley company here, did the packing, and it is a pretty piece of work.

The farmers in the Nephi district collaborated in getting up an exhibit of the truck grown in that section. Their exhibits of potatoes, beans, melons and wheat are among the best in the building, and have won the admiration of farmers from other parts of the state.

Among the side features of unusual interest is a big exhibit put up by the dairymen of Salt Lake City and environs. Demonstrations of different grades of butter are made before the spectators every hour if he lingers long about the exhibit.

CENTER OF ATTRACTION.
Just outside of the agricultural building, George E. Booth of Brigham has an exhibit which includes every imaginable kind of vegetable that grows in this part of the country, all of high class. Maybe's display would be a creditable one to represent the farming industry of the State of Utah, if it were chosen for such a purpose.

The William Royley company shows Johnson apples packed ready to ship, and the display was arranged up as a practical lesson to Utah orchardists, so that they may see just what the apples should be packed for eastern shipments. J. Hensley, a well known expert on the fruit from Grand Junction, who is now with the William Royley company here, did the packing, and it is a pretty piece of work.

The farmers in the Nephi district collaborated in getting up an exhibit of the truck grown in that section. Their exhibits of potatoes, beans, melons and wheat are among the best in the building, and have won the admiration of farmers from other parts of the state.

Among the side features of unusual interest is a big exhibit put up by the dairymen of Salt Lake City and environs. Demonstrations of different grades of butter are made before the spectators every hour if he lingers long about the exhibit.

CENTER OF ATTRACTION.
Just outside of the agricultural building, George E. Booth of Brigham has an exhibit which includes every imaginable kind of vegetable that grows in this part of the country, all of high class. Maybe's display would be a creditable one to represent the farming industry of the State of Utah, if it were chosen for such a purpose.

The William Royley company shows Johnson apples packed ready to ship, and the display was arranged up as a practical lesson to Utah orchardists, so that they may see just what the apples should be packed for eastern shipments. J. Hensley, a well known expert on the fruit from Grand Junction, who is now with the William Royley company here, did the packing, and it is a pretty piece of work.

The farmers in the Nephi district collaborated in getting up an exhibit of the truck grown in that section. Their exhibits of potatoes, beans, melons and wheat are among the best in the building, and have won the admiration of farmers from other parts of the state.

Among the side features of unusual interest is a big exhibit put up by the dairymen of Salt Lake City and environs. Demonstrations of different grades of butter are made before the spectators every hour if he lingers long about the exhibit.

CENTER OF ATTRACTION.
Just outside of the agricultural building, George E. Booth of Brigham has an exhibit which includes every imaginable kind of vegetable that grows in this part of the country, all of high class. Maybe's display would be a creditable one to represent the farming industry of the State of Utah, if it were chosen for such a purpose.

The William Royley company shows Johnson apples packed ready to ship, and the display was arranged up as a practical lesson to Utah orchardists, so that they may see just what the apples should be packed for eastern shipments. J. Hensley, a well known expert on the fruit from Grand Junction, who is now with the William Royley company here, did the packing, and it is a pretty piece of work.

The farmers in the Nephi district collaborated in getting up an exhibit of the truck grown in that section. Their exhibits of potatoes, beans, melons and wheat are among the best in the building, and have won the admiration of farmers from other parts of the state.

Among the side features of unusual interest is a big exhibit put up by the dairymen of Salt Lake City and environs. Demonstrations of different grades of butter are made before the spectators every hour if he lingers long about the exhibit.

CENTER OF ATTRACTION.
Just outside of the agricultural building, George E. Booth of Brigham has an exhibit which includes every imaginable kind of vegetable that grows in this part of the country, all of high class. Maybe's display would be a creditable one to represent the farming industry of the State of Utah, if it were chosen for such a purpose.

The William Royley company shows Johnson apples packed ready to ship, and the display was arranged up as a practical lesson to Utah orchardists, so that they may see just what the apples should be packed for eastern shipments. J. Hensley, a well known expert on the fruit from Grand Junction, who is now with the William Royley company here, did the packing, and it is a pretty piece